The only problem, of course, was that we hadn't built them yet and we had to build our own. So we hired someone to do just that. He had done some really good work when creating an SSL Certificate server, which allows for certificates to.. I decided to look through the open source projects, to get things up and running. I came across Shubin's github repository, and found a number of interesting projects that required some sort of server access. So I looked some of the existing projects. Shubin has a lot of open source projects with PHP, for example. It was obvious that there would be something worth looking into, so I started looking for projects which took PHP as a base to build. Eventually, he had a few interesting projects in mind for running on a Linux server.

"And now as a bonus topic, I figured I'd get into the business side of running something and I've been running software company for over a decade for the past six of those years, so I've had time to look around and see how things work.. So, I did the reverse of what you did with that. I hired someone for whom this was not an option and he's also been working in this area for the last four of those years. I asked him what it takes to set up and run a software company for some four years, and he told me that "it's not as hard as it looks"..
